The November death returns are Twenty-third ..... A. B. Smith be far smaller than for October, individual communities influenza did not become epidemic until late in October and for these the November returns will tell the story.

The first cases of influenza in the state seem to have occurred about September 12, and in most counties the disease was epidemic in the early days of Octoder. It is a peculiar fact that one or two of the most remote counties in the state were among the first invaded, while some counties traversed by main routes of travel escaped invasion for two weeks or more. It was noted that one town on one of the most traveled railroads, and a junction point at that, had very little influenza for two or three weeks after the disease had assumed epidemic proportions in other cities not far removed.

The death rate for December and January will not be light, and what the final total will be is only a matter of surmise, but it will no doubt be astounding.

The total number of deaths reported from Carroll county for Eason were appointed to arrange the two months mentioned above was 44. While the death rate was heavy for Carroll during those
